Online seminar focusing on the introduction of the newly established Research Software Engineering (RSE) team at Charles University and the computational services available to researchers and students.

Research Software Engineering (RSE) workshop, led by Dr. Philippa Broadbent (University of Southampton) 9.-10. 12. 2025

The workshop focused on developing key skills in automation, efficient data handling, and best practices in research software development.

Participants learned how to automate repetitive tasks using the Unix shell (Bash), work efficiently with files and data via the command line, and gained a basic understanding of version control. They acquired practical experience with Git and the GitHub platform, including tracking changes, reverting to previous versions, and collaborating on software development within a team.
